Cavin' In!

The [illegible] Register [illegible] the [illegible] says [illegible] That [illegible] Johnston confronts [illegible] under Buell, one [illegible] us taking and [illegible] General Buell has [illegible] front of Johnson, an army of [illegible] men, and [illegible] to bear on us at other given points, 30,000 more. What the Confederate commander has may not be stated, but it is probably enough to hold his present strong position against any numbers that might attack him there; but the enemy has the choice to attack him there, or to pass him on either side, get to his rear, and cut off his supplies. This he can do by leaving a sufficient army in front of Gen. Johnson, while he can still send upon the right or left flank a force as large as he leaves behind. That this is the plan of Buell is now no longer doubtful. He has placed a force of 8,000 at Glasgow, 30 miles to the eastward of Bowling Green, threatening the rear of Gen. Johnson, while it is within easy supporting distance of two other posts held in strong force by the enemy. If the plan of Buell is successful, it may result in a great disaster. To defeat him, it is absolutely necessary that more men be at once sent to Bowling Green, Gen. Johnson must have a force sufficient to attack Buell in front, with good chance of success, and by doing so will not only defeat his scheme in the centre of the Confederacy, but immediately transfer the war to the State of Ohio, and thus save the whole South from the great danger of being overrun in the first fine weather of the coming spring.

We are satisfied that beyond the flittering possibility of a foreign intervention, the only rational hope we can entertain of a speedy termination of this war is to be found in an offensive campaign across the Ohio, from the point that General Johnston now defends.—The best line of advance imaginable to strike at the vitals of the North, which are the Lake States, is that through Kentucky. The country is a plain, the people not actively hostile, supplies without stint, and the great resource of the North is beyond. The enemy understand this, and are making tremendous efforts to secure Kentucky to them without the possibility of escape. This season of inaction, from the inclemency of the skies, is a precious boon of providence to us; we can determine on a plan, and prepare for its execution in a short time, that will render naught and abortive all the costly and complicated devices of the adversary."

HOW NEWSPAPERS SENT BY OVERLAND MAIL DISAPPEAR.—It has been a matter of surprise and a source of complaint with many that newspapers sent to and from the Eastern States so often fail to reach their place of destination. The following extract received in Sacramento a day or two since, and dated Ruby Valley, January 11, 1862, will shed some light on the subject. It is written by a member of the 2d Regiment California Cavalry, in the company of Capt. McLean, stationed at that point: "We have plenty of newspapers here. The bad roads and the want of horses and coaches to convey the mail through to California, render it necessary for the Mail Company to have all the newspaper mail stowed away in the different stations between here and Salt Lake. All we have to do is to open a canvass mail bag and help ourselves. The mail agents don't care, why should we? I have, myself, for the last few days, been passing away the time in reading papers published all over the Northern States. We take them by the half bushel. The Overland Mail is a humbug so far as carrying papers and letters through punctually in the winter is concerned; at least it is so with their present facilities."—Sac. Union.

Traitors Hope in Foreign Interference

The [illegible] news [illegible] has had the effect [illegible] the [illegible] least [illegible] victory [illegible] of traitors [illegible] thwarted [illegible] the electric [illegible] the banner of freedom [illegible] Bull Run, and the [illegible] disaster [illegible] Ball's Bluff [illegible] nearly effaced by the [illegible] achievements at Roanoke Island, Fort Henry and Fort Donelson. But the [illegible] does not stop here. Our army is [illegible] completely organized, and a rapid [illegible] victories will soon put an end to the already trembling hopes of a shin plaster Confederacy. Norfolk has undoubtedly been freed [illegible] negro selling serfs, by the persuading force of steel and sheeted flames of shell. The "Confederacy" will soon be cut into bleeding fragments by Federal blades being drawn from the Atlantic to the Mississippi—freeing the States of North Carolina and Tennessee of their brigand hordes, and completely dismantling the capital from the carcass of the Confederacy. Next, the Mississippi will be cleared of all piratical vampires by the faithful sons of freedom, who are anxious to purify the elements by the combustion of saltpeter.

The self styled Confederacy, thus divided and surrounded, will look in vain for either heart or head. One by one they will be driven from their dens, until they find themselves without a place to hide their hideous forms.

Already do they begin to feel the weakness of their Niggerarchy, and are crying lustily for succor from abroad. With bended knees they are imploring France to take the initiative in breaking the Southern blockade. Let France interfere if she likes. Uncle Samuel will teach her a lesson that the sons of freedom will never weary in rehearsing. At the expense of her crown she dare not attempt it. England, too, has been supplicated to recognize Niggerdom as a Sovereign Serfdom. But she hesitates. A single nod of the head and we'll sweep her commerce from the world.—Aye, more! She will be driven from her American Possessions to return no more forever. And still the story will not be told. Ireland, so long struggling for freedom, will be redeemed from British misrule and made a sovereign among the nations—and that too by the force of Yankee steel, supported by the brave hearts and sinewy arms of half a million of England's oppressed. More than that, the enraged eagle will not return to its nest until its talons shall have torn the vitals from the Bullying Master of the seas. To this end will two millions of freemen swear, and their oaths will be recorded on the scrolls of Bunker's Hill, New Orleans, Lake Erie, Saratoga, and Yorktown.

The Jeff Davis government, as an equivalent for these great sacrifices on the part of England, offers her free trade for fifty years. This reminds us of a certain offer recorded by men of old. The devil is represented as taking a certain person up in an exceeding high mountain and showing him all the kingdoms of the earth, and the glory of them.—All this he offers to bestow upon his host if he would only fall down and worship him. The offer was liberal, but unfortunately the poor devil was not able to make good his promise, for with all his greatness he was not possessed of a single foot of land to his name.

The generous slaveocrats do not stop here. They offer to free all negroes born after the recognition. France! We have learned the value of their lying promises to the value of $500,000,000 and a hundred thousand lives. The perfidy of such sneaking bribes is too apparent. England will not bite at their cotton hook—she dares not do it. She knows the valor of American arms too well, and she

[illegible]

THE AMOOR COUNTRY. [illegible] Mr. [illegible] the Amoor [illegible] American [illegible] the Amoor [illegible] by means of [illegible] from the United States [illegible] it has already sprung up [illegible] tributaries of the Amoor [illegible] populate [illegible] fifteen or twenty millions of people [illegible] vast and productive country, not [illegible] of wealth in its material resources; and the valleys watered by the Amoor are rapidly filling up with the military colonies of Russia. [illegible] demand for the products of American industry and ingenuity.

The Corvallis Union of the 17th, under the head of "Vandalism," speaks of the sinking up of the harbor of Charleston by the Stone Fleet, and says:

"It would be a good deed if the commercial nations of the world compel old [illegible] Lincoln to dig them up again with his nails."

Most unquestionably the Union would be glad that the commercial nations of the world would make war on our Government and thus if possible secure success to the rebels in arms against it. To the closing up of Charleston harbor the [illegible] of the States say Amen. It is a most effectual blow to rebellion in that quarter. It is an earnest of the determination of the American Government and American people effectually to put down rebellion.

THE LATE NEWS.—The Advertiser of yesterday has a labored article to show that the late news is not of a disastrous character to the rebels. It is anxious to give the secessionists comfort in Oregon. It intimates that France and England may recognize the South under the proposition of the rebels that all negroes born after the recognition shall be free. We see no comfort for the rebels or their friends here. They may buoy their hopes [illegible] in Tennessee—that the South will be recognized and sustained in its rebellion by France and England—they may hope that our Government will be broken down and become the byword and scoff of nations—but their hopes will perish.

Rose O'Greenhow, the wife of a rebel [illegible] resident at Washington for a long time, used her position there to give information to the rebels of the movements of Government [illegible] spy and traitoress. Evidence was so strong against her that she was arrested. From her place of confinement she sends out a most virulent letter against the President, abounding in all the sophisms which [illegible] in secession papers. We are not at all surprised to find this letter in the secession paper of this city. It was written for the very purpose of being scattered in the loyal States through such mediums.

FROM UTAH.—The Mormons have driven Gov. Dawson from Salt Lake City, and are taking measures to erect the Territory into a State with or without the consent of the Government, as the case may be. Government will attend to the matter at a proper time.

EFFECT OF THE CALIFORNIA FLOODS ON WASHOE.—The Carson City Silver Age thinks that while the floods will give an impetus to mining in California, they will greatly damage the agriculture [illegible] The latter result [illegible] especially for the reason that Nevada Territory is dependent on that State for its food supplies, which may perhaps be cut short, until the deficiency can be met by importation.

CITY.

The MORNING OREGONIAN has a larger SUBSCRIPTION LIST than any other Daily published in this City.

[illegible]—We learn of one or two cases of [illegible]. It is in a mild form, [illegible]

STEAMER NEVADA.—The next steamer which [illegible] for this port is the Sierra Nevada.

EXPORTS.—The steamer Brother Jonathan, which [illegible] took as freight the following: [illegible] boxes, 18 packages lard, and [illegible] chickens.

BOARDING HOUSE.—Mr. Peter Guild, living about two miles below town, on the river, is prepared to accommodate well about twenty boarders. His house is pleasantly situated. Miners, give him a call.

NO LOCALS.—The indisposition of our reporter we hope will be an apology for the small number of local items in this morning's issue.

VERY GOOD.—We learn that about six hundred dollars' worth of tickets for Multnomah No. 2's ball on Friday night last, were sold by the committee.

MORMON MOVEMENTS.—Several Mormons have been arrested in Los Angelos county who had obtained permission to visit the U. S. troops there, ostensibly to sell butter, but really to purchase arms from the soldiers. After some detention they were suffered to depart, after receiving proper caution for their future behavior.

ATLANTIC COAST TELEGRAPH LINE.—The well known Cyrus W. Field has proposed to construct a line of telegraph on the Atlantic coast to connect the national forts on the coast. Much of the line is to be submerged. A committee of the Senate has the matter under consideration.

APPOINTMENT.—Col. Steinberger has appointed Major Tilton, of Olympia, Lieutenant Colonel of his regiment. We learn that Col. S. has recruited nearly a company in San Francisco.

We learn from a Californian, who came up on the Brother Jonathan, that a telegraphic rumor had reached San Francisco, a few moments before the sailing of the steamer, to the effect that the thief, Floyd, with his five thousand men, had been taken by the Federals.

MEXICO AND THE SPANISH INVASION.—It now appears that England and France, after having led Spain into an ugly scrape with Mexico, and possibly with the United States, are inclined to forego their views respecting a tripartite alliance, and leave the hidalgos to fight it out for themselves—an alternative which must result, it is clear, in the ultimate defeat of Spain and the burthening of that country with a debt which will answer her in place of a sick infant for years to come.

THE BEAVERS SETTING THE EXAMPLE.—The beavers are energetically at work in all their old haunts throughout the State, setting man the example of untiring industry and perseverance under difficulties. The Yreka Journal says that they have been remarkably busy of late in Scott Valley: "At the slough of Scott river, running around the Island, near Fort Jones, they have built a dam nearly a quarter of a mile long, which is as good a piece of work as men could perform. Trees nearly a foot through have been cut into lengths, which together with drift-wood and fence rails have afforded them sufficient timber to build. Their modus operandi is first to dig a hole with their broad shovel-fashioned tails, and then tip a log down into it, climbing on the top of the upper end to force it down solid. Others attend to filling up with brush and mud to prevent leakage, all rustling about with great activity. Their dams are strong enough for a horse to travel over, and their cunning is fully equal to that of a monkey."

MARRIED:

In San Francisco, Dec. 24th, 1861, by Rev. Mr. Jackson, Daniel F. Webb to Anna K. McKee, eldest daughter of Joseph W. KeKee, of Gray's Harbor, Washington Territory, formerly of this city.

Commercial and Financial.

We have San Francisco commercial dates of the 15th February. The produce market for the past week presented no new feature. Receipts were in excess of the demands, especially in wheat and flour.

We make the following quotations:

SEWING MACHINES

ARE UNEQUALLED BY ANY FOR

BEAUTY AND SIMPLICITY OF CONSTRUCTION

—AND—

Efficiency in Working.

A GOOD SEWING MACHINE

SHOULD BE WELL MADE, simple in its construction, and easily kept in order; should make A TIGHT LOCK-STITCH, alike on both sides of the material, and should sew any and all materials that can be sewed.

It should be able to use cotton, thread, or silk, directly from the spool, and to sew from coarse to fine, and from thick to thin, with rapidity, and without changing the tension. It should also be able to make the tension greater or less, on both the under and upper threads, and with uniformity; and should have a straight needle; curved ones being liable to break.

The needle should have perpendicular motion—this is absolutely necessary for heavy work.

It should be able to bind with a binder, hem with a hemmer; should stitch, fell, run and gather; and always ready to work.

It should be capable of using the same size thread on both sides of the work, and of using different colored thread or silk, above or below, to correspond with any two colors of cloth to be united.

It should be able to make a long or short stitch, and to fasten off the seam, and commence sewing tightly at the first stitch, and to run easily, and make but little noise.

It should have a wheel-feed; no others are in constant contact with the work.

It should not be liable to get out of order; neither should it require a screw-driver or wrench to set the needle.

It should not be liable to oil the operator's dress.

It should not form a ridge on the under side, nor ravel.

The Ventriloquist

A friend of ours, who is liberally endowed with imitative powers, related to us long since an amusing adventure, in which he played a prominent part that made us really envy his faculty of manufacturing fun. Our friend was a lodger for the night at the [illegible] House, Macon, Ga. To use his own language:

"I was lighted to my room on the fourth story, at bedtime. I had [illegible], and was enjoying my self-confession [illegible]. The room, although elevated, was [illegible]. In the [illegible] corner was [illegible]. The [illegible] just over the street [illegible] with all its penetrating powers [illegible] atmosphere, and the [illegible] ing before my window. I had been in bed perhaps a half an hour when I heard [illegible] steps approaching my door. The door was opened [illegible] could see three were [illegible] however. My [illegible] hension but upon [illegible] I resolved to play [illegible] neighbors. I began to imitate [illegible] the country with [illegible] spitting cough. By his side appeared [illegible] his bed [illegible] so of a [illegible] whenever opportunity [illegible] a chance. Even the [illegible] was not forgotten, aroused by the [illegible] parents, it manifested vexation by plaintive wailings. 'Old below [illegible] for us at the disturbance—mamma [illegible] upon baby, and confusion was [illegible] over in my corner. About this time I saw a head pop up from the other corner.

"'Bob! Bob!' whispered the head, 'Bob, burst my [illegible] if we haven't made a mistake, and got into a family room!'

"'Old man,' whispered the old woman, 'didn't you hear some one at the door?'

"'No, no! go to sleep—you are always thinking about ghosts.'

"'The head' brought out from under the cover a body, and then legs.

"'Bob,' said the 'head,' 'you can stay if you are a mind to, but I'm going.'

"And out came 'head,' body and legs, followed by 'Bob,' now aroused to the consciousness of the peculiar delicacy of his situation. No time was taken to clothe themselves, for the door was immediately opened, and the 'head' and 'Bob' disappeared.

"It required all the nerve I possessed to restrain my laughter while my neighbors were hastily decamping; yet I kept up the conversation between the 'old beloved' and mamma, and the wailings of the baby.

"But a few moments elapsed ere my door was again opened, and the bar-keeper, with a candle, followed by the 'head' and 'Bob,' entered the room and approached my bed. I feigned heavy sleep.

"'You see you are mistaken,' observed the bar keeper.

"'I tell you,' replied the 'head,' 'that Bob and I were in that bed yonder—see where we crumpled it—and we heard a man, his wife, and I don't know how many children, over in this corner.'

"The muscles of the bar-keeper's cheeks began to twitch and Bob seemed touched with awakening intelligence.

"As profound as was my slumber I could scarcely help from roaring out.

"'Do you think that fellow has been playing a prank on us?' asked the 'head.'

"'Well, it kinder looks that way,' says the bar keeper.

"The 'head' approached my bed, laid its hand roughly upon my breast, and shook me violently.

"'Stranger! stranger!' said he, 'where's that woman and baby?'

"I yawned, stretched, and rubbed up my sleep loaded eyes, and appeared astonished at the unexpected visitation.

"'Where's that woman and baby you had here?' repeated the 'head.'

"'What woman and baby are you speaking of?' said I, in utter amazement.

"'Ah, poor innocent young man! how suddenly ignorant you are. Get up from your bed, and follow us instantly!'

"'But, sir, I—'

"'Get up, I say!'

"I half arose, yet hesitated. The look of the 'head' was austere; yet the bar keeper and Bob were smiling.

"'Get out of bed, and don't keep us here all night.'

"I was a little irritated at this, and springing to the floor, I demanded the cause of my being disturbed at that hour of the night.

"'No harm will be given you, stranger,' said the bar-keeper, with a half choked laugh.

"'For hiding that woman and baby,' said the 'head' with a smile struggling at the corner of his mouth.

"'What do you wish with me?' said I, hastily putting on my clothes.

"'Arise, and follow us,' said the 'head,' in a deep, sepulchral voice; 'you are to meet the fate of the royal beast who was drowned in a butt of Malmsey.'

"Having finished my toilet, I followed my curious visitor to the 'hole in the wall.' I was led up to the bar, and called upon in the presence of his honor, who presided behind, to make a full confession of my capital offence. Bob exploded, bar keeper swallowed his quid trying to save his breath, while his honor had closed his eyes in ecstacy.

"'Give us,' said the 'beak,' in an authoritative tone, 'some wine. Let it be dark for the criminal, that he may drown his recollection of his deed of darkness. Give to us pale wine, that we may hide the frightful vision that drove the blood from our cheeks, in his health giving body.'"

GEN. STEVENS.—Gen. Stevens has received the highest commendations from Gen. Sherman, for the able manner in which he lately conducted the important expedition sent from Port Royal.
